RECOMMENDATION OF THE GRAND JURY. The October Grand Jury, who were discharged yes-terday by Judge Martine, handed to the Judge a memorandum, saying that the Grand Jury had no time to investigate the death of Feeks, the lineman, but that the whole subject had been carefully examined by a coroner's jury. District-Attorney Fellows will bring the case before the November Grand Jury. The Grand Jury also handed in a presentment relating to excise cases. The jurors say that cases against liquor-dealers are accumulating at the rate of 100 a week, and that only a "small proportion of the cases can be acted upon by the Grand Juries and the cases can be acted upon by the Grand Juries and the Court of General Sessions, on account of the number of prison cases awaiting trial." They repeat the recommendation made by the Grand Jury in June, 1886, that the cases be disposed of at the Special Sessions. If it seems dangerous to allow police magis-trates to sentence to a year's imprisonment without giving the defendant the right to demand a jury trial, the Grand Jurors suggest that the punishment for violations of the excise law might be reduced. Judge Martine concurred in the main in the expressions of the Grand Jury.

District-Attorney Fellows, at the request of the Grand Jury, wrote to Governor Hill, enclosing a copy of the presentment, and requesting him to bring the subject to the attention of the Legislature.

Tall Clocks.

From all who are furnishing large city or country houses, the new Tubular chiming clocks are deserving of special attention. The bells possess a sweetness and permanence, or unchangeableness, of tone hitherto triattainate. Chocks may be had with full chimes of these bells, or with a single bell only, for the hour and half-hour stroke, as may be desired. Cases of oak, astique oak and mahogany, of desires not elsewhere obtainable; or cases will be made to order, at scarcely any increase of cost, to harmonize with interior work of ball, when such correspondence in strok is wanted.

THIS WINTER'S FASHIONS

"Shoulder capes, called also pelerines," says the leading fashion paper, " are the most fashionable pieces of fur at present, as they are more convenient than jackets for wearing over gowns that have large full sleeves, and are altogether in better keeping with the long princesse coats now in vogue. The new capes have raised shoulders, with high turnedover collars, also the new flaring Elizabethian and Marie Antoinette collars." It might have been appropriately added that these fur garments can be obtained from H. C. F. KOCH & CO., the popular dry-goods house at Sixth-ave. and 20th-st. The firm makes a specialty of furs and sells them at prices onethird less than those of most houses. The firm guarantees that its goods are orrect in style and workmanship and are not excelled by those of any other house .- N. Y. Tribune.

THE STORY OF THE CAPTAINS.

THEIR FORMAL REPORTS ON THE SINKING OF THE CRYSTAL WAVE AND THE CLEOPATRA. The United States Local Steamboat Inspectors received formal reports yesterday from the masters of ooth of the steamers which were lost in the collision off the Capes of Delaware on Tue-day morning. aptain S. G. Martin, of the Crystal Wave, reports Passed Five Fathom Bank Light-snip at 4:47 a. m. teering S. W. by S. While running that course made out a light on the port bow. Gave orders to starboard the wheel and go to the leeward of the vessel. Kept off S. by W., which put him a point on our starboard bow, when, drawing marer, made his green light, and was so far to leeward of him I did not consider it necessary to blow two whistles. My attention was drawn to a vessel on the pert bow, when the quartermaster said: 'That steamer is now showing her red light,' and on turning saw that she was coming Immediately rang for engineer to back at full speed, but she struck us at our forward starboard gangway, sinking us in about two minutes."

Captain Ira E. Dolo, of the Cleopatra, reports: about 5 a. m., the weather being very dark but clear, the lookout on the bow reported a red light on the port bow. The first officer in the pilot house saw that it was a stramer heading in the opposite direction and showing her red light, and as she was clearly on the bow our course was not changed. Shortly after, when the slips had neared each other to pass, she suddenly changed her course with a starboard wheel and shot across our bow.

board wheel and shot across our bow. Our wheel was put hard aport at once, hoping to clear her, but it was too late, and we struck her on the starboard bow.

Captain Dole said that he sent one boat to take off those who were on the Crystal Wave, and put his own men into three other boats. His vessel was kept affoat for some time by her cargo.

Lewes, Dol., Oct. 31.—The captain of the steamer L, and D. Jones reports that he found to-day the steamboat Crystal Wave seven miles south of the lightship in seventeen fathoms of water. He found no trace of the steamer Cleopairs.

We know that a boy wants strong clothes, and that's the kind we make. Whether he admits it or not, he wants to dress as other boys. hence we put good style into his garments, and our vest suits with knickerbockers precisely meet his manly aspirations.
